

SORT CONFLICT EVENTS IN BOOK ORDER HERE:

JILL

Jill sees girls from the village and remembers a past attempt to get respect.

Jill is HURT because her village has de-valued her efforts all her life. On the way to meet father, she runs into girls who make fun of her.

Jill is teased by girls from the village. Jill gets angry at the village.

Jill is teased by girls from the village. Jill gets angry at the village.

Jill WANTS to save her father and prove her worth to the village. She drags his body home from the field where they'd been treasure hunting and found a cursed chest.

Jill's father collapses and, in a whisper, he tells her about the only cure—water from a magic well.

Jill's father collapses and, in a whisper, he tells her about the only cure—water from a magic well.

(Note that this objective is the same as another conflict. That's okay. Some events will be duplicated.)

Jill's father collapses and, in a whisper, he tells her about the only cure—water from a magic well.

Jill's father warns her that the well is at the top of an enchanted hill.

Father warns her that her anger will stop the magic.

JACK

Jack sees his cargo as a key to his future.

Jack looks at his cargo and imagines freedom from his stepmother.

Jack gets a rare opportunity to transport goods in his boat. Success means he can make a living and leave stepmother's house.

Jack thinks leaving will solve all his problems. But he'll need confidence to run a new business. The boat crash sends Jack into a panic.

Jack BELIEVES that if others don't value him, he isn't worth anything. Jack thinks about rich stepmother's disdain.

A huge storm approaches.

Jack straps down the cargo to keep it safe.

Jack worries as the storm hits.

Jack tries to steer through the storm.

Jack worries more and rechecks cargo.

Storm pushes boat toward rocks.

Jack panics when boat hits rocks.

Jack is HURT because his stepmother has de-valued his worth all his life. He believes money is worth. Crashing his boat is the catalyst to making him panic.

Storm settles down. Boat grounded. Water in boat needs to be bailed out.

Each Scene should contain:

GOAL

CONFLICT

DISASTER

REACTION

DILEMNA

DECISION

Jack's boat is caught in a storm and runs aground on a sandy reef with his boat full of water. On a hill above the beach, he sees a well, and he's sure there's a bucket hanging at the end of a rope. He swims to shore, heading toward his only hope.

Jack sees the well and decides to go get bucket.

JILL

Jill attempts to be friendly with village doctor.

Jill complains about being teased by girls from the village. Village doctor tells her she ought to move if father dies.

Jill BELIEVES that if others don't value her, she isn't worth anything. Jill thinks about doctor's advice.

Jill gets angry at the doctor.

Doctor's warning makes her angry.

Jill TRIES to gain village's respect by learning to cook

Jill TRIES to gain village's respect by doing father's job when he gets sick

JILL

The second she steps onto the slope of the hill, a rock jumps under her foot, making her twist her ankle. She retreats and goes to find something to wrap her ankle.

She meets an old woman who gives her a bandage but warns her about more dangers.

Jill complains to her old woman friend about the village. Old woman reminds her that the village is afraid of her, too, and warns her of her anger stopping the magic.

Jill asks old woman for advice to get village to respect her. Old woman says their opinion doesn't matter.

Jill decides she shouldn't let someone else determine her thoughts.

Jill tries to ascend the hill again but is stopped by a ring of thorny bushes that rise up suddenly. She climbs a tree with a branch that reaches over the bushes and jumps.

Jill talks to herself as she assesses the damage to her other ankle. Now both ankles are hurt. And her elbow is scraped.

Jill remembers another attempt to get village's respect.

Jill TRIES to gain village's respect by boasting

Jill finally makes it to the top of the rocky hill, only to find a boy there, hauling the bucket up by the rope. She explains her predicament and asks him to give her the bucket. Jack laughs at her fairy tale and then ignores her.

Jill remembers the last time someone ignored her—a village boy she'd had a crush on. His slight had embarrassed her in front of her friends.

Jack ignoring Jill makes her angry, and she demands the bucket. She stomps her foot, forgetting that she'd twisted her ankle earlier, and screams in pain. Jack thinks she's the local lunatic and uses the rope to tie her up.

Jill has some very angry and pointed words to share with Jack, in a tone that's not at all polite.

Jack turns to walk away with the bucket, and Jill lunges for him. She catches his heel, making him trip, and he hits his head on one of the rocks.

Jill worries to herself because she now must care for two hurt people, yet she's tied up.

JACK

Jack is tripped and hits his head. He hallucinates his father marrying his stepmother and her warning to Jack.

Jack tries to reimagine himself standing up to stepmother.

Jack hates that stepmother even invades his nightmares.

Jack hallucinates about when father died, Stepmother demoted Jack to lower position, pig farmer. He was assistant to father who ran the place.

Jack feels shame about his position. Vows to change his life.

Jack hallucinates about Stepmother and friends laughing at Jack and his pigs.

Jack decides he's let his Stepmother affect his confidence.

JILL

With Jack hallucinating, Jill is able to get loose and tie Jack to the well so she can fill the bucket with water.

Once Jill gets the water from the well, she must find a way down the hill without spilling the water. As she starts down, a root grows up and trips her. She falls down the hill, spilling the water from the bucket as she tumbles.

Jill lies on the ground at the bottom of the hill and contemplates giving up.

Jill finally makes it up and down the hill, practicing calming her mind and forgets about village.

Jill realizes that her clothes are soaked in the water and the bucket is next to her. She wrings her wet clothes into the bucket and takes the water to her father.

She takes the water to her father.

Her father survives and tells her that few people would have thought how to save the situation. Because her father sees her worth, she sees her value.

Her father survives and tells her that few people would have thought how to save the situation. Because her father sees her worth, she sees her value and the village doesn't matter.

Jill thinks about her father's words, she sees her value and village doesn't matter.

Jill goes back to rescue Jack's boat with the bucket and her father's boat. Jill returns the bucket to the well and gives some water to Jack.

JACK

Once Jack's head clears, Jill explains what she's done, and he forgives her.

Jack's EPIPHANY happens when Jill shares her epiphany with him.

Money doesn't create worth. Jill's willingness to help Jack made him realize he'd been concentrating on his stepmother's opinions too much.

Jill's willingness to help Jack made him realize he'd been concentrating on his stepmother's opinions too much.

JILL

Discusses with old woman about why the magic worked. Father's pure heart made the magic work. Now Jill's epiphany has calmed her heart too.

Jill asks the old woman why Jack could get to the top of the hill unharmed and the woman tells her that Jack wanted the bucket, not the magic water. The hill knew that, somehow.

She runs into same village girls later and starts to get angry, but remembers her father's words. She isn't affected by their words.

She runs into same village girls later and isn't affected by their words because she remembers her father's words.

Jill realizes village opinion doesn't matter.